EXPLORING COPENHAGEN is a book that brings together multi-disciplinary design advocates sharing their personal experiences, reflections, and visions for Copenhagen to engage city stakeholders in ensuring people-first, sustainable city development. The stories explore the role of design as a tool to understand the global reach of Copenhagen's everyday livability.

EXPLORING COPENHAGEN features 12 chapters over 12 months in Copenhagen, with personal interviews and testimonies describing the challenges and successes of the city's diverse urban neighborhoods. The book is designed to illustrate Copenhagen through these personal narratives, in addition to hand-drawn depictions of the authors and the urban landscape.

"It is our vision to create a platform where visitors can learn from Copenhagen's holistic planning approach and in turn become advocates for quality urban design solutions at home. When we advocate for an authentic user-experience as a visitor, we gain added-value for our own local experience as an everyday user. We help decision makers make better cities, and that includes you!"
